

Resource: Resource 8 – Litter Facts: True or False Litter Quiz
Text: This resource explores the issue of litter. First, read the factsheets and then complete the short true/false quiz. It involves literacy skills and numeracy skills.
Suitable for: S1-S2
Approximate time: 20 minutes
Curriculum links: SOC 3-08a, SCN 2-20b
Meta-skills: Self-Management: Focussing, Innovation: Curiosity, Critical thinking

Sustainable Development Goal links:

Littering: Getting caught will cost you

If you're spotted dropping litter in Scotland
you can be hit with an £80 fine

If you avoid paying your fine, the figure jumps to as much as

£2,500

with a trip to the courts thrown in for good measure.

Illegal fly-tippers
can be fined up to £40,000

Preventing chewing gum litter

Scots love chewing gum. We spend £28.6 million on the stuff every year.

But used gum causes a huge litter problem. Discarded chewing gum never breaks down. It makes our towns and cities look grubby, harms our wildlife and uses up a hefty chunk of our public budgets – on average, each bit of gum costs only 3p to buy, but £1.50 per square metre to clean up.

On average,
each piece of chewing gum costs:

3p
to buy

£1.50
to clean up

True or false litter quiz

True or false?

1. Every year Scotland spends at least £46 million cleaning up after our litterers — that's around £20 for each taxpayer.
2. Banana peel doesn't count as litter because it is biodegradable.
3. If you drop chewing gum on the pavement it takes 5 years to decompose.
4. In Singapore, a man was charged $15,000 for dropping a cigarette butt.
5. If you are spotted littering in Scotland you could get a £20 fine.
6. Flytipping is illegal. If you are caught you can be fined up to £40,000.

True or false litter quiz

Answers

1. True.
2. False – it takes up to 2 years to break down.
3. False – discarded chewing gum never breaks down.
4. True – punishment in Singapore can even include a prison sentence.
5. False – you can be fined £80.
6. True.